Marchant Real Estate Founder and President Urges Agents to Virtually Connect with Meals on Wheels Clients Amidst COVID-19 Emergency

Greenville, SC – Founder and President of Marchant Real Estate, Seabrook Marchant announced a call to action to his agents when he discovered that Meals on Wheels, a non-profit that provides nutritious meals and personal contact to homebound individuals, was short of volunteers and resources. As part of an ongoing effort to continue to support homebound individuals while also abiding by safety regulations, Meals on Wheels incorporated a new contactless delivery system in addition to coordinating with volunteers to call homebound individuals to check in overall wellbeing.

Due to the tumultuous nature of the COVID-19 virus, nonprofits like Meals on Wheels expressed a need for local volunteers to ensure that the homebound beneficiaries are not forgotten during this time of uncertainty. "I am grateful for the charitable spirit our company possesses and our desire to help our community at all times," Seabrook Marchant said as he asked for company-wide assistance, "Meals on Wheels is working tirelessly to continue to provide meals and support to those who are homebound. If you are able, I ask that you place a phone call to clients on the days that Meals on Wheels is not delivering to ensure their homebound clients are okay."

Muriel Taylor, Director of Volunteers and Community Engagement, explains the efforts being made by the organization, "We continue to ensure the delivery of hot, nutritious meals and personal interactions for our homebound clients during these events. We are all working hard to ensure that service is not interrupted for the homebound in our community."

Marchant Real Estate joined forces with Meals on Wheels over 15 years ago. This year, Marchant Real Estate designed and subsequently dedicated an award in memory of a Meals on Wheels beneficiary, Homer Bryant, a veteran who served as a member of the United States Army during WWII.
